HNC Explains Why Syrian Opposition Groups Failed to Unify at Geneva Talks

28 February 2017, 03:24 GMT

Kassis noted that the members of the Astana platform did not want to diminish role of the Geneva peace talks in the Syrian settlement process, adding that there is ongoing coordination between the Astana group and Russia's representatives, aimed at achieving "better results."

Earlier in the day, the Astana platform members met with Russian Deputy Foreign Minister Gennady Gatilov in Geneva.

The fourth round of UN-backed intra-Syrian talks between the government and opposition factions kicked off in Geneva on Thursday.
